

MITCHELL SILBERBERG & KNUPP LLP
A LAW PARTNERSHIP INCLUDING PROFESSIONAL CORPORATIONS

Jeffrey M. Movit
A Professional Corporation
(917) 546-7708 Phone
(917) 546-7678 Fax
jmm@msk.com

March 13, 2019

BY HAND

Susanna Molina Rojas
Clerk of Court
Supreme Court of the State of New York
Appellate Division, First Department
27 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10010

Re: Haggis v. Breest, Index No. 161123/2017

Dear Ms. Rojas:

We are counsel to Plaintiff-Appellant Paul Haggis. We write to notify the Court that Mr. Haggis hereby withdraws his Notice of Appeal dated September 13, 2018 in the above-captioned action. This appeal was not perfected prior to its withdrawal.

Please note, however, that Mr. Haggis has not withdrawn his Notice of Appeal (which was also dated September 13, 2018) in the parties' related action entitled Breest v. Haggis, Index No. 161137/2017 (the "Related Action"). Mr. Haggis perfected his appeal in the Related Action yesterday, and Mr. Haggis intends to proceed with that appeal.

Please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions.

Respectfully,

Jeffrey M. Movit
A Professional Corporation for
MITCHELL SILBERBERG & KNUPP LLP

cc: Counsel of Record (by hand)

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

PAUL HAGGIS,

Plaintiff,

v.

HALEIGH BREEST,

Defendant.

INDEX NO. 161123/2017

Hon. Robert R. Reed (J.S.C.)

IAS Part 43

NOTICE OF APPEAL

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that Plaintiff Paul Haggis, by his attorneys Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP, hereby appeals to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, First Department, from those parts of the Order of the Honorable Robert R. Reed, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of New York, which granted Defendant Haleigh Breest's Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), which Order was entered in the office of the Clerk of the Court on August 15, 2018. A copy of the so-ordered transcript comprising the Order appealed from is attached hereto.

Dated: September 13, 2018
New York, New York

MITCHELL SILBERBERG & KNUPP LLP

By: /s/ Christine Lepera

Christine Lepera
ctl@msk.com
Jeffrey M. Movit
jmm@msk.com
437 Madison Avenue, 25th Floor
New York, New York 10022
Telephone: (212) 509-3900
Facsimile: (212) 509-7239

Attorneys for Plaintiff Paul Haggis

To: EMERY CELLI BRINCKERHOFF & ABADY LLP
Ilann M. Maazel, Esq.
Zoe Salzman, Esq.
Jonathan S. Abady, Esq.
600 Fifth Avenue, 10th Floor
New York, New York 10020
Telephone: (212) 763-5000

Attorneys for Defendant Haleigh Breest

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK

Paul Haggis,

Plaintiff,

-against-

Haleigh Breest,

Defendant.

Index No. 161123/17

NOTICE OF ENTRY

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that attached is a true and correct copy of the Court transcript dated July 26, 2018 and so ordered on August 14, 2018 by the Honorable Robert R. Reed, Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of New York, and duly entered in the office of the Clerk of the Court on August 15, 2018.

Dated: August 15, 2018
New York, New York

EMERY CELLI BRINCKERHOFF
& ABADY LLP

By: _____/s_____
Ilann M. Maazel
Zoe Salzman
Jonathan S. Abady
600 Fifth Avenue, 10th Floor
New York, NY 10020
(212) 763-5000

Attorneys for Defendant Haleigh Breest

TO:
Christine Lepera
Jeffrey M. Movit
Lillian Lee

12 East 49th Street
New York, NY 10017
(Attorneys for Plaintiff)

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF NEW YORK - CIVIL TERM - PART 43

PAUL HAGGIS,

Plaintiff,

-against-

Index No.
161123/17

HALEIGH BREEST,

Defendant.

MOTION

111 Centre Street
New York, New York
July 26, 2018

B E F O R E:

HONORABLE ROBERT R. REED,
JUSTICE

A P P E A R A N C E S:

MITCHELL SILBERBERG & KNUPP, LLP
ATTORNEYS FOR THE PLAINTIFF
12 EAST 49TH STREET
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10017
BY: CHRISTINE LEPERA, ESQ.,
JEFFREY M. MOVIT, ESQ.,
LILLIAN LEE, ESQ.,

EMERY CELLI BRINCKERHOFF & ABADY, LLP
ATTORNEYS FOR THE DEFENDANT
600 FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10020
BY: ILANN M. MAAZEL, ESQ.,
ZOE SALZMAN, ESQ.,
JONATHAN S. ABADY, ESQ.,

VINCENT J. PALOMBO, RMR, CRR
OFFICIAL COURT REPORTER

Vincent J Palombo - Official Court Reporter

1
2 SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK
3 COUNTY OF NEW YORK - CIVIL TERM - PART 43

4 HALEIGH BREEST,

5 Plaintiff,

6 -against-

Index No.
161137/17

7 PAUL HAGGIS,

8 Defendant.

9 MOTION

-----X
111 Centre Street
New York, New York
July 26, 2018

10
11 B E F O R E:

12 HONORABLE ROBERT R. REED,

13 JUSTICE

14
15 A P P E A R A N C E S:

16 EMERY CELLI BRINCKERHOFF & ABADY, LLP
17 ATTORNEYS FOR THE PLAINTIFF

600 FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10020

18 BY: ILANN M. MAAZEL, ESQ.,
19 ZOE SALZMAN, ESQ.,
JONATHAN S. ABADY, ESQ.,

20 MITCHELL SILBERBERG & KNUPP, LLP
21 ATTORNEYS FOR THE DEFENDANT

12 EAST 49TH STREET
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10017

22 BY: CHRISTINE LEPERA, ESQ.,
23 JEFFREY M. MOVIT, ESQ.,
LILLIAN LEE, ESQ.,

24
25 VINCENT J. PALOMBO, RMR, CRR
26 OFFICIAL COURT REPORTER

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 THE CLERK: While I realize there are
3 plaintiffs and defendants there are two different
4 actions where each one is vice versa. We'll deal with 5 these matters sequentially, so 161123 of 2017 is Haggis,
6 Paul versus Breest, Haleigh. We'll do motion sequences
7 number one and two on that action first.

8 THE COURT: Can I have appearances, please.

9 MS. LEPERA: Good morning, your Honor.
10 Christine Lepera, Mitchell Silberberg and Knupp and my 11 colleague, Jeff Movit, counsel for Paul Haggis as 12 plaintiff in the Haggis versus Breest case and as a 13 defendant in the Breest versus Haggis case.

14 MR. MAAZEL: Good morning, your Honor, Ilann
15 Maazel with Emery Celli Brinckerhoff and Abady. We 16 represent Haleigh Breest both -- in both actions.

17 MS. SALZMAN: Good morning, your Honor, Zoe
18 Salzman, also from the law firm of Emery Celli
19 Brinckerhoff and Abady, and with us is our partner, 20 Jonathan Abady.

21 MR. ABADY: Good morning, your Honor.

22 MS. LEE: Good morning, Lillian Lee for 23 Mitchell Silberberg and Knupp, also for Paul Haggis.

24 MS. LEPERA: My associate.

25 THE COURT: This is the motion to strike, we'll 26 do that one first and we'll move along.

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 You can have a seat.

3 MS. LEPERA: I'll stand, I'm going to stand.

4 THE COURT: Yes.

5 MS. LEPERA: So the motion to strike in the 6 Haggis versus Breest action is really centralized with 7 respect to the motion to dismiss the Haggis action and 8 the primary opposition to the motion to strike is really 9 their motion to dismiss.

10 So if I might, your Honor, just lay the ground
11 work here of the scenario so that we can appreciate the 12 scenario.

13 So essentially the claim that we brought on 14 behalf of Mr. Haggis, who is a very well-known director,
15 academy award winning director, is for intentional
16 infliction of emotional distress. And the claim was 17 premised on a series of communications, and I view it 18 as, essentially, a campaign, albeit short-lived, to 19 extract, based on false allegations of rape, a very,
20 very serious matter -- generally, but in today's world
21 even more so. There's an automatic assumption of guilt
22 associated with it and the press has a field day with 23 any suggestion by anyone of having done anything such as 24 that.

25 So Mr. Haggis received a very detailed and very 26 lurid, salacious drafted complaint to him personally

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 which contained a single claim of gender violence and it
3 basically accused Mr. Haggis of extremely violent and 4 inappropriate conduct in 2013.

5 Mr. Haggis retained us very, very distressed,
6 very, very concerned. Ultimately, denies, vigorously,
7 these allegations, and was confronted with a situation
8 of a rock and the hard place, if you want to call it
9 that.

10 So we had some discussions with Ms. Breest's
11 counsel, there was some correspondence which may not be 12 in the record because it contained some confidential
13 information regarding Mr. Haggis's business agreements
14 and relationships that he was very scared about losing,
15 and we vigorously disputed the allegations and made an 16 effort to dissuade Ms. Breest's counsel from filing or 17 even continuing to threaten to file.

18 It became very apparent and we felt very 19 strongly that this was -- I'll just use a nonlegal
20 term -- a holdup, and that was confirmed when, because 21 Mr. Haggis wanted me to continue communications just to 22 ultimately flush out the scenario, when I was given a 23 number of $9 million as hush money in order to prevent 24 the filing of the action, at which point Mr. Haggis
25 went -- beyond, beyond pain, beyond anguish, because he 26 realized that at this point there's no way he's doing that -- he can't even do that.

PROCEEDINGS

And number two, it is clear that this is the leverage, it's either file the action and have no leverage to extract from me or don't file the action, which is clearly the goal, and get an exorbitant amount of money for what -- which is clearly false.

THE COURT: How should we distinguish, in any legal setting whether a demand for settlement is an item of extortion?

MS. LEPERA: Yes, I think that's a very good point, your Honor, because that is what they particularly focused on.

THE COURT: I think we generally desire people to try to engage in a settlement of their differences prior to instituting suit. It's expected in, for example, contract cases that you will provide a demand letter so that the other side knows exactly what it is that you are seeking by way of damages.

It would be normal practice, I would think, in personal injury matters for someone to say here is my -- here are my injuries and this is what I seek in damages. So if someone does that, how does that become -- how does that become a recoverable claim?

MS. LEPERA: Let me explain, first of all, I never agreed to have any settlement communications with

PROCEEDINGS

Breest's counsel. I was essentially given the instruction with waiving privilege to go at them and attempt to circumvent what they were doing.

When it became clear and it was apparent, which we concluded was occurring, that it was effectively an extortion effort, not an effort to settle a claim which we were engaging in as a meeting of the minds, that's a fact question and I suggest that when you look at the settlement privileges and you look at the issues relative to those goals, they are discussions about liability and the value of the claim, a particular claim, and we were not -- we were not in any way, shape or form using that, other than as effectively -- even though there's no criminal extortion in New York, there is a criminal penal code for extortion, and the conduct that they engaged in specifically --

THE COURT: And the way you addressed that then is saying, District Attorney Vance, the attorney for this particular party have come to me with something that I consider to be extortionate and ask you to intervene.

MS. LEPERA: And that occurred, and Mr. Haggis did that, but there's no remedy -- and actually the courts that we cite acknowledge that when you threaten a litigation, false allegation of a heinous crime such as

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 this, which they did and they put statutes in their
3 pleading that you are going to be in a criminal -- fear
4 of your life situation, not to mention in this climate
5 losing everything you have and if you don't want to do
6 that, give me $9 million. When you do something like
7 that, the question is whether it's outrageous conduct.

8 Now, we all know that rape is an outrageous 9 situation, but what is equally outrageous, and this is 10 where we need some ability to have reckoning is if it is 11 a false allegation of rape, which is our position, that 12 is used to create an emotional distress and a loss in 13 someone so drastic, there has got to be recourse in a 14 civil proceeding, and the only place where that can be 15 is in IIED claims, and there are cases in our brief
16 where there were false allegations --

17 THE COURT: Tell me where those are, because I 18 didn't get that --

19 MS. LEPERA: Sure -- actually, all the cases
20 that Breest counsel cite they talk about it's a drastic 21 claim and not favored and talk about threat of 22 litigation, all that, those are not sexual abuse cases,
23 they are not sexual assault cases.

24 If you look at the cases of -- Nigro --

25 THE COURT: So there's a separate standard for 26 sexual assault cases versus other cases --

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 MS. LEPERA: Yes.

3 Let me read this to you --

4 THE COURT: -- either there a baseless claim or 5 there is not or either there's -- a baseless claim can 6 serve as grounds for intentional infliction of emotional 7 distress or not. Which case are you referring to?

8 MS. LEPERA: I'm talking about Nigro versus 9 Pickett, 39-AD 3d, 720 --

10 THE COURT: Where is that in your papers?

11 MS. LEPERA: Just one second, your Honor. It
12 is on page six of our opposition brief and in this 13 particular case, your Honor, what is really telling is 14 there was a -- using of the threat of making a public
15 false allegation of sexual harassment and sexual assault
16 in order to settle, in order to obtain -- pressure the 17 plaintiffs to settle.

18 So this is -- and then similarly we are DeJesus
19 which is a case in this Court where there was a denial
20 of summary judgement to dismiss an IIED claim where the 21 defendants had allegedly falsely accused plaintiff of 22 sexual assault.

23 So there are authorities that are more
24 analogous, even if they keep saying it's not the First 25 Department -- well, they haven't found one that says no.
26 It is a similar situation on point to Nigro, which is a

PROCEEDINGS

Second Department which is obviously clearly valid and persuasive court here.

And there's also another case in the Second Department where there was a valid IIED claim where defendant attempted to coerce plaintiff's resignation by false charges of an affair.

Now that one is even less of a serious charge, but when you're talking about -- and particularly in today's society, your Honor, it is a new world. It's not 1980, 1990 or even 2000. Here, we have a situation with the climate that the emotional distress that is caused by publicizing in the press and accusing someone of a crime, which is obviously an implicit threat, they can go and make him a criminal, but you're accused of being a criminal, publicly, and to say that that conduct should not be subject to some sort of reckoning in a claim when you don't have -- you know, there's no other tort that fits the complexion, is my point, your Honor. That's why the courts say if there's a tort that fits the complexion better of the actions, then, fine. Don't go with the IIED.

But in this court, and in this climate, that is the measure of how you get recompensed for outrageous conduct, and outrageous conduct has been deemed in this jurisdiction to be false allegations of sexual assault

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 or rape pressuring someone to basically settle and give 3 them something that they wouldn't give them, it's 4 coercive, and the reason I bring up the statute of 5 coercion, because these facts that I'm talking about,
6 basically threatening someone to do something by 7 accusing them of something false that is so outrageous
8 can be a crime. It is obviously outrageous. So to the 9 suggestion it is not outrageous just because it's 10 cloaked or purportedly cloaked in some sort of a
11 settlement guise, which it's not, because that's how you
12 distinguish, your Honor, between an actual effort to 13 settle in good faith. All they would have had to have 14 done was to simply say, you know, we're filing this 15 action, we're happy to talk about settlement
16 communications. At some point let's have a -- you 17 know -- are you willing to do that as opposed to just 18 insisting if they didn't -- if they didn't get some sort 19 of, you know, response and/or money, then they were 20 going to continue to promote this in coming back to him,
21 to us and say: We're going to do this.

22 He had to stop it. He had to stop it. It was 23 going to come to the point where whether or not she 24 actually filed it -- and of course she's filed it now
25 after him -- but whether or not she actually filed it, 26 he suffered this incredible distress, family, medical,

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 loss of opportunity -- I mean the business is, you know,
3 he had to come forward with it and explain what was 4 going on in order to pursue the claim, and it is validly
5 stated, the elements are met, it is a motion to dismiss,
6 it's at the pleading stage, has to be liberally
7 construed and there's no justification to simply say
8 IIED does not work in this context. There's no case
9 that they cite -- in fact, the only cases that they cite 10 for the situation where a settlement conversation was 11 not held to be actionable, it was in the context of a 12 defamation case. Defamation case says qualified
13 privileges or prelitigation statements and the like.
14 This is not a settlement conversation that falls into 15 any privilege, it doesn't fall into any bucket of 16 excusion under the CPLR for evidence because it's not a
17 conversation about the validity of the claim.

18 So these are the distinctions here and it's 19 important in this day and age, your Honor, to not let 20 one side of the story and make it simply defensive be 21 told. When -- and I will say this, if what I'm saying
22 is right and my client didn't do what they say he did
23 and what they put in that pleading, if that's not 24 outrageous conduct, I don't know what is.

25 THE COURT: Well, outrageous conduct is what is 26 alleged in the Nigro case where they say that they

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 threaten to make public.

3 MS. LEPERA: Correct. That's what they did.

4 THE COURT: Saying that you are going to file a
5 lawsuit is not saying you are going to make something
6 public.

7 MS. LEPERA: That automatically becomes public,
8 that's the whole point of it --

9 THE COURT: But the law is different between 10 matters of defamation, all these different types of 11 cases, you can kind of cloak what you are doing in this 12 kind of veil, you can protect yourself by making your 13 claims and submitting them to court, as opposed to going
14 to a particular tabloid or newspaper or television news
15 or going on the Internet, and saying here are my claims.

16 By saying that they have prepared their version
17 of what -- prepared their version of what they say has 18 happened to their client and that they're prepared to 19 put that for consideration, for due consideration by a 20 court, and they're telling you ahead of time that that's 21 what they're going to do, it seems --

22 MS. LEPERA: If that's all they did, your 23 Honor, that would be different. The difference here --

24 THE COURT: Well --

25 MS. LEPERA: -- is the nine million.

26 THE COURT: The difference is they asked for a number? You said that --

PROCEEDINGS

MS. LEPERA: It --

THE COURT: -- is it a campaign simply because they make a demand number that you deemed as outrageous?

MS. LEPERA: Yes. See, the point being if you --

THE COURT: I don't see it. That means every time -- every time in a contract case or personal injury case someone goes into discussions with counsel for the other side and offers a number that one side deems as outrageous, then they now have a legal claim --

MS. LEPERA: No, your Honor, that's because the conduct in those cases are not threatening to falsely accuse someone of rape or sexual abuse and that's the distinction that we have here.

THE COURT: Is there any case law that suggests that that is a fair distinction? If you go in and say that you are prepared to say that the Metropolitan Transit Authority took no steps to protect a passenger, and as a result that passenger was rendered a quadriplegic and as a result now there's a $25 million potential claim. MTA doesn't want that in public. It doesn't matter -- I am looking for some suggestion that case law says that -- simply that that particular nature of a claim is different --

PROCEEDINGS

MS. LEPERA: Yes. Okay --

THE COURT: -- because what you are tying this to is a demand, a demand that you are unhappy with.

MS. LEPERA: I'm tying it to the allegation that's going to be made. In the MTA example you gave, your Honor, obviously the person is a quadriplegic, there's no doubt, maybe there's a causation issue. There's something that happened.

Here, if you read -- I'm going to read this quote into the record because I think this is the pivotal point you are trying to get to, which I believe is the distinction. It is the nature of the false allegation. It is the nature of the effect of that false allegation in the public.

The MTA, obviously, didn't intentionally intend to hurt this person.

If you are merely accusing someone of a crime, is not enough, perhaps, to state a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Falsely accusing someone of sexual assault goes beyond filing a criminal complaint. A conviction or even an arrest for sexual assault is a serious offense with a myriad of consequences. A conviction might force plaintiff to register as a sex offender, lead to incarceration, and here's the most important part, and

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 the mere accusation is typically accompanied by an
3 incredibly negative social stigma. That's the DeJesus
4 case on page seven of our brief, which is another case
5 where they let an IIED claim go forward based on this 6 false -- our saying it is a false accusation, they're 7 saying it is a false accusation.

8 It should not be compared to a situation where 9 you have a contract dispute, you have a personal injury
10 case, you have, you know, nonheinous type of accusations
11 that are, I would say, maybe very sad or whatever but 12 not in -- not in this context. And that's why the 13 coercion statute is relevant to this issue, because it
14 talks about a person being guilty of coercion. When he 15 compels or induces a person to engage in conduct which,
16 the latter has a legal right to abstain from engaging 17 in, i.e. pay money, okay, by instilling fear in that 18 person, if the demand is not complied with, and -- okay, 19 and that accusation is to accuse someone of a crime or 20 cause criminal charges or expose a secret or publicize 21 an asserted fact whether true or false, intending to 22 subject -- true or false, whether intending to subject
23 some person to hatred, contempt or ridicule.

24 So when you use a device of calling someone
25 something like a pariah that they will lose everything, 26 that causes -- if that's not outrageous conduct where

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 you lose everything, I don't know what is.

3 THE COURT: I think it argues too much,
4 counsel.

5 What you're saying -- you are calling for a
6 chill --

7 MS. LEPERA: No.

8 THE COURT: Well, that's --

9 MS. LEPERA: No I'm not. She could have filed
10 a complaint any time she wanted to.

11 THE COURT: So if she filed a complaint without 12 telling you --

13 MS. LAPERERA: That would have been fine.

14 THE COURT: -- that would have been
15 preferred --

16 MS. LEPERA: No, that would have been fine --
17 an extortion claimant or IIED claim is because she 18 didn't want to file, she wanted $9 million. She wanted
19 to not file it. She didn't want to pursue her claim.

20 THE COURT: What you're saying, counsel, is 21 that it is -- what you're saying, counsel, is that 22 although courts would like parties to avoid litigation, 23 they can't do so in cases involving sex -- claims of 24 sexual misconduct --

25 MS. LAPERERA: I'm not --

26 THE COURT: -- so that's chilling --

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 MS. LAPERA: No, no. I'm not saying it's 3 chilling --

4 THE COURT: I'm not saying that you're saying
5 it, I'm saying as a matter of policy, it is -- what you
6 are suggesting would have a chilling effect. It would 7 say you would set up a standard where in any case
8 involving sexual misconduct, that the party who is 9 making that allegation does not go about things the 10 normal way. Which is to present their claims to the 11 other side and seek -- and make a demand. What you're 12 saying is that if someone who says to someone, has acted
13 in a way -- well, if someone claims that another person
14 has engaged in sexual misconduct against them, that they 15 should not go about things in the way that the Court
16 policy prefers which is to sit down and make a 17 settlement demand outlining their claims of injury and 18 make a settlement demand, because you say merely the -- 19 you say that merely because someone is a -- is prepared 20 to make a claim involving sexual misconduct that it is 21 necessarily going to be perceived as this threat that 22 can be -- can be perceived as a threat that kind of 23 morphs into a pattern of outrageous behavior.

24 MS. LEPERA: I think it's fact-specific case by 25 case, but I think that the cases that we cite which 26 actually address the pariah significance and stigma that

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 someone can use to extract something, it's very
3 different and it's not a typical situation, your Honor,
4 it is not a typical case where the policy of the court
5 is being impacted or challenged. That's what they would 6 like the Court to believe, but I am telling you, with 7 respect, your Honor, that when you are in a situation in 8 this climate of someone -- and if we're right -- falsely
9 accusing you of doing something, unless you give them
10 hush money, then they are going to destroy your life,
11 that puts you in that moment in time in absolute terror,
12 fear, distress, because you know once that's publicized,
13 it is going to be destruction, and that's what they 14 intend. They want to use the leverage and the lever of 15 the fear, as noted in the coercion statute, to extract
16 something based on an accusation that is going to create 17 someone to have this fear of becoming a pariah. That 18 kind of a case, your Honor, is not the run-of-the-mill
19 settlement policy, et cetera. It is effectively
20 extortion. And if we are right and this is a lie, then 21 he's got no remedy.

22 THE COURT: They said civil extortion is not a
23 claim in New York.

24 MS. LEPERA: It's not, but it's treated at IIED
25 by the Nigro case and the other cases we cite because it
26 was extortion that was being committed. So they use --

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 THE COURT: The Nigro -- let me get back to it.
3 The Nigro case makes a point of them threatening to go
4 outside of court, all right. Did they threaten to go
5 outside the Court? Do your papers say that they 6 threatened to go outside --

7 MS. LEPERA: To file false complaints. They 8 threatened to file false complaints.

9 THE WITNESS: Nigro case talks about them
10 threatening to go public and --

11 MS. LEPERA: Both.

12 THE COURT: Both.

13 And I'm asking, in this case, did they threaten 14 to go to the tabloids and not go to court --

15 MS. LAPERERA: They --

16 THE COURT: -- and not go to court, or did they 17 simply say they were going to present their case in 18 court --

19 MS. LAPERERA: They litigated their case in the 20 press. They -- up to today, I get calls all the time 21 from the New York Post saying Mr. Haggis, we're told he 22 was going to be in court today. They published 23 depositions notices, they published letters to the 24 court -- to the press on a regular basis. The way they 25 drafted the complaint, if you read the complaint --

26 THE COURT: I read your complaint, too, and the way you draft your complaint is exactly the same thing they do, and from what I gather in looking through these papers, your side has talked to the press, as well.

PROCEEDINGS

MS. LAPERA: We absolutely filed this case, there's no question. It became public and we addressed it --

THE COURT: From what I gather, this became public because you filed your complaint first.

MS. LAPERA: Yes, because we wanted to stop the campaign of trying to extract the money. Now they can't extract the money through an extortion effort of saying we're not going to publicize if you pay me. They don't want to -- they don't want to file the case, they wanted $9 million. This was not like a good faith settlement concept. That's where I think the Court is being misled, with all due respect. It is a situation -- I think you can appreciate it if you put yourself in the shoes of someone who is falsely accused of a horrible, horrible act and when I -- I don't think my complaint has lurid details of violence and torture, as theirs do, all of which is not true, and you have that that's being threatened to be used against you, it's different. It's just different and I believe they have no case on point.

The coercion statute, I think is extremely relevant when it talks about outrageous conduct, that is

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 outrageous conduct. And if we're right and that's what
3 they did, then the fact of doing that is what this is 4 about. It's not about settling their case. It's about
5 what they were doing and the motivation to essentially
6 create the sphere and this terror which is the whole
7 point of an emotional distress claim, it's at the 8 pleading stage. I think we're entitled to,
9 respectfully, proceed.

10 THE COURT: Actually, the case we were supposed 11 to be arguing -- the motion we were supposed to be 12 arguing about was the motion to strike.

13 MS. LEPERA: I understand. That was just with 14 respect to -- okay, the motion to strike is with respect
15 to four paragraphs that we think are press arguments not 16 following the CPLR and we believe that those, you know,
17 should be stricken, but that's not the core of this 18 issue in this case, is what we've been talking about, 19 your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Thank you.

21 MR. MAAZEL: Thank you, your Honor, and I think 22 your Honor has hit the nail on the head in this case in 23 multiple respects.

24 Mr. Haggis is asking this Court to create a 25 special rule for people accused -- men accused of sexual 26 misconduct to be able to sue their accuser simply for giving them the opportunity to settle the case.

PROCEEDINGS

They're using the IIED claim, which is the most disfavored claim in New York. As your Honor knows, the Court of Appeals said the conduct must be so outrageous in character go beyond all possible bounds of decency and be utterly intolerable in civilized community, and there's not been a single case in the entire history of the New York Court of Appeals where they have upheld an IIED claim, it's never happened.

We've cited 15 to 20 First Department Court of Appeals cases that threw out IIED claims with much more -- substantial allegations of outrageousness. Publicly threatening to kill a pregnant woman? First Department in Owen said as a matter of law on a motion to dismiss, that's not enough.

Secretly filming someone's death in a hospital and broadcasting it on national television? The Court of Appeals in Schwenk said it's reprehensible, it's atrocious, but on a motion to dismiss doesn't come close to meeting the standard for an IIED.

Trespassing a psychiatric facility and publishing a picture of the patient and outing him to the entire world. The Court of Appeals in Howell said that doesn't come close to stating an IIED claim on a motion to dismiss.

PROCEEDINGS

Broadcasting images of rape victims on television after promising them anonymity. The First Department in the Doe case -- the First Department said that doesn't come close to stating an IIED claim.

Making false statements to the police, causing arrests and incarceration, the First Department on a motion to dismiss in Matthauss said that doesn't come close to stating IIED claim.

Same in the Slatkin case -- threatening arrest and criminal prosecution.

Threatening to paint a swastika on someone's house, Seltzer case, that doesn't come close.

The First Department Court of Appeals have also held that even filing frivolous lawsuits, no matter what the allegation is, cannot be an IIED claim.

So in the Kaye V Trump case, the allegation was that the defendant filed two baseless lawsuits. Also filed a false criminal complaint against the plaintiff, also attempted to instigate the arrest of plaintiff and her daughter and the First Department in the Kaye case said that's not IIED, as a matter of law.

Threatening to file a lawsuit also cannot be IIED, that is the plain holding of Court of Appeals and the First Department, just a few cases.

The Court of Appeals said in Howell, the actor is never liable where he's done no more than to insist upon his legal rights in a permissible way.

PROCEEDINGS

Court of Appeals in Wehringer, a threat to do what one has a legal right to do is not actionable.

The Ahmed case, threatening to bring a frivolous lawsuit, quote unquote, a frivolous lawsuit, that cannot be IIED, even if the -- there was an explicit threat to destroy someone's reputation. That's a quote from Ahmed case, Southern District quoting New York cases.

The First Department case in Steiner, threatening litigation, not enough.

The Siegelman case, quote, actions such as threatening to file a lawsuit cannot be viewed as utterly intolerable in a civilized community, close quote.

Now, as your Honor noted --

THE COURT: What are we to do with the Second Department cases of Nigro versus Pickett and Sullivan versus Board of Education?

MR. MAAZEL: Okay, of course the first point is that's not the First Department.

THE COURT: Not the First Department, so I need to -- so I need a First Department case to say that those cases don't matter, they are Appellate Division cases, so I am bound by them unless a First Department case says that those cases aren't accepted in the First Department or there's a First Department case that's squarely on point, and goes the other way.

PROCEEDINGS

MR. MAAZEL: Those cases, I believe -- while those -- well, those cases are wrong but they're distinguishable -- first let me discuss while they're distinguishable.

First of all --

THE COURT: And do it in the context again of this being a motion to dismiss, not a motion for summary judgement.

MR. MAAZEL: Sure.

THE COURT: In a motion to dismiss, we accept their statement that these cases -- excuse me, that the allegations of your client are without basis. That's where we begin. From their standpoint, an individual has been advised that someone is going to make false allegations against him of sexual misconduct during a current climate which includes, you know, Harvey Weinstein and me too -- hash tag me too movement, and so in this particular context that someone is being met with what they say are false allegations and then being told that the only way to rid himself of those allegations is to pay $9 million, which they consider to

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 be an outrageous figure representing a level of 3 extortion.

4 MR. MAAZEL: Sure. So -- and I think I'm glad 5 your Honor mentioned -- it is a motion to dismiss and 6 we should only focus on the allegations in the 7 complaint, and the only allegations in the complaint are 8 at paragraph 17 through 20. Those are the only
9 allegations, factual allegations, and what they say --
10 paragraph 17 to 18 -- is that an attorney for Ms. Breest
11 sent Mr. Haggis a draft legal complaint and with a cover
12 e-mail or letter that said if you are, quote, interested
13 in discussing a resolution of this matter without 14 resorting to litigation, you can feel free to contact
15 us. And so as a courtesy he was given prior notice of 16 the lawsuit. That is in their own complaint.

17 Paragraph 19 says that they decided to avail
18 themselves of the opportunity to have a the settlement
19 discussion. They didn't have to have a settlement
20 discussion if we didn't hear from them. We could have 21 just filed. They called us. They admit it. It's in 22 their own complaint. They wanted to have a settlement
23 discussion.

24 If we look at Document 35 in the record,
25 Ms. Lepera's office sent an e-mail to my office asking 26 for the terms of your settlement demand in writing.

PROCEEDINGS

They asked for a demand. This is what they wanted.

They wanted to have a settlement discussion.

Then Paragraph 19 to 20 of the complaint is an allegation that the plaintiff made a settlement demand. Sort of thing that happens every day in this State, probably happening hundreds of times in New York State as we speak. This is what your Honor noted New York courts encourage, settlement discussions.

Then, after that settlement demand was made, according to the record, Document 36, their office sent another e-mail asking for a follow-up call after that discussion. And then after that, Document 37, they sent another e-mail saying, instead of speaking today, we're filing this IIED complaint against you.

In short, instead of having further settlement discussions, we're going to sue you for having settlement discussions.

Now there is no case, not Nigro, not Sullivan, no case that remotely supports the proposition that merely having a settlement discussion is the basis for an IIED claim.

In the Nigro case, the plaintiff -- or the defendant, quote, filed a false complaint with the NYPD. That was essential to the Nigro case. That did not happen here.

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 In the Nigro case the defendant, quote,
3 threatened to make public a false allegation. That 4 wasn't about having a routine settlement discussion the 5 likes of which happen all the time. That was about 6 something quite different.

7 And the Sullivan case, again had nothing to do
8 with settlement discussions, that was just someone
9 spreading false rumors about affairs.

10 So there is really -- there is no case that 11 they can cite that supports their position.

12 On the other hand, there are so many cases in 13 the First Department and the Court of Appeals that 14 squarely reject this proposition that you can sue
15 someone for alleging what we all agree is very bad
16 conduct. And just as an example, the Como case, First 17 Department, that was a case where the defendants
18 circulated a false statement that a coworker was racist
19 and, quote, had an office cubical containing a statuette
20 of a black man hanging from a white noose and -- which 21 is pretty outrageous -- and the First Department said
22 let's assume that was a false complaint, let's assume it
23 was deliberately false, let's assume it was intended to 24 cause emotional distress. The First Department said on 25 a motion to dismiss, that allegation of racism is not --
26 does not come close to stating an IIED claim.

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 Now what we just heard here, and I think as
3 your Honor noted, is they want a special rule for men
4 accused of sexual misconduct, sort of an anti me too
5 rule -- you get to sue your accuser for having 6 settlement discussions or for saying that you -- you
7 will file a lawsuit.

8 There is absolutely no court that has ever
9 upheld such an outrageous rule. And I should point out,
10 as your Honor noted, of course settlement is strongly 11 encouraged in this State and in every state in this 12 country.

13 The Jakubowicz case, as a matter of policy, 14 settlement is favored as a means of facilitating the 15 resolution of disputes.

16 Jones Lang, First Department, settlement
17 discussions are encouraged as a matter of judicial 18 policy.

19 So what would happen if this claim could go
20 forward? I think very important policy implications
21 really being the first court to allow a claim like this 22 to go forward. The first thing that will happen is the 23 parties will not try to settle cases or at least parties
24 in this special rule of plaintiffs who were victims of 25 sexual misconduct. They're not going to try to settle
26 cases. People are going to sue first and ask questions

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 later, because why should anyone risk having their 3 client be sued simply because they tried to engage in 4 settlement. No one is going to do that. We gave them
5 the courtesy, we gave them notice, now they sue us? I
6 don't think so. That is going to lead to a huge burden
7 on the judiciary. Totally unnecessary --

8 MS. LEPERA: Can I be heard briefly in 9 response --

10 MR. MAAZEL: I'm not finished --

11 MS. LEPERA: I thought you were finished.

12 MR. MAAZEL: I'm not finished --

13 MS. LEPERA: Okay, finish.

14 MR. MAAZEL: The second point, this kind of a 15 rule allowing this kind of claim to get beyond a motion
16 to dismiss is going to turn lawyers into witnesses. The 17 witnesses to the settlement discussion are counsel, 18 defense counsel. Ms. Lepera was on that call. The 19 basis, the basis for their claim was what was said on a 20 phone call between lawyers, and I can just inform your 21 Honor, and it is in the record at Document 24, that when 22 Ms. Lepera heard the demand, did she say this demand
23 goes beyond all possible bounds of decency? No.

24 Did she say, this demand is utterly intolerable
25 in a civilized community? No.

26 What she actually said is that's the demand I

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 expected.

3 That's what she said. And if this case goes
4 forward to a fact finder, a jury is going to have to 5 hear Ms. Lepera talk about exactly what happened in that 6 call.

7 So the public policy implications of allowing 8 an IIED claim to go forward based on settlement
9 negotiations, you will need one set of lawyers for 10 settlement and then you will need a second set of 11 lawyers for the actual lawsuit, because the settlement
12 discussion will become the basis for the IIED claim.

13 And the third public policy implication here,
14 which we touched on is that they do want a special rule
15 for men accused of sexual misconduct. That's the rule
16 they've articulated today, and it would be quite ironic
17 if we had a rule like that given that in the First 18 Department victims of sexual misconduct usually cannot 19 bring an IIED claim. That's the holding in the Clayton
20 case, the First Department.

21 So are we going to have a regime where if you 22 are a victim of sexual misconduct, you cannot bring an 23 IIED claim? But if you're accused of sexual misconduct, 24 you can. We're going to have a rule that allows the 25 sexual abuser to sue the victim but not the victim sue
26 the sexual abuser? It's absurd.

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 So I think we should see this case for what it
3 is, it's something that falls well below, well below the 4 standard of at least 15 to 20 First Department Court of 5 Appeals cases. It has no support in the Second 6 Department. It's really nothing more, your Honor, and 7 that -- I don't see this but it's nothing more than a
8 publicity stunt because they filed this case -- first 9 Mr. Haggis raped Ms. Breest, then he sued her. And then 10 the first thing they did is they leaked this case to the 11 press and said, look, we sued. Look what we did.

12 Ms. Breest heard about this case through the 13 press, because defense counsel apparently shared the 14 complaint with the press before -- before she'd even 15 heard about it.

16 So it's an outrageous case. The only thing
17 that's outrageous in the case is the case itself. It 18 has no support in the case law and we urge the Court to 19 dismiss this IIED claim, not let it go forward another 20 day and, of course, if your Honor does that as we 21 believe you should, the motion to strike would be moot.

22 MS. LEPERA: May I your Honor, just briefly, 23 please.

24 THE COURT: Yes.

25 MS. LAPERA: Notice he didn't answer the 26 question about Nigro and why it's not binding because it is and it's not been rejected in the First Department because it hasn't, number one.

PROCEEDINGS

Number two, let me just correct him because First Department has made it very clear that it's not about a man or a woman it's about the accusation of a heinous act. The First Department in Caixin, C-A-I-X-I-N Media versus Guowengui, G-U-O-W-E-N-G-U-I, January 11, 2018, denied dismissal of an IIED claim because the revelation of Ms. Hughes, private information, accusations of criminal and immoral conduct and threats to reveal videos and other information about her sexual history created significant distress.

So he's wrong on that point.

He's also wrong on the point about -- there's another First Department case which deals with a false child abuse allegation. These are different than talking about -- in the issue with respect to the case where the woman was not present in the room where somebody threatened to kill her, she wasn't even present. I forget the name of the case but he cited that right off the bat.

Then another --

THE COURT: Mr. Haggis wasn't present when you had the discussions about the $9 million; right?

MS. LEPERA: Well, he wasn't present, but it

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 was affecting him in the sense that if this was not --

3 THE COURT: He wasn't present. Nothing about 4 this --

5 MS. LAPERA: No.

6 THE COURT: There were no words that were 7 uttered to him, except by you.

8 MS. LAPERA: Well, of course. I had to.

9 THE COURT: Okay, but you are --

10 MS. LAPERA: I had to.

11 THE COURT: -- but you are the person who is 12 conveying the words that you say caused him emotional 13 distress.

14 MS. LAPERA: Yes.

15 THE COURT: You didn't have to convey those 16 words. You could have just said it was an outrageous
17 number, if you wanted to, I'm just saying, but as a
18 factual matter -- and this is part of what he said, 19 you -- it almost screams for a -- it almost screams for 20 a disqualification, right? In order to establish -- in 21 order to establish the -- in order to establish your 22 claim, you would have to say that you had settlement
23 discussions with counsel that were -- presumably 24 shouldn't be allowed in testimony or in the record,
25 confidential settlement discussions, and then you
26 conveyed that information to your client and you saw

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 that your client was visibly shocked and appalled, and 3 then your client will say the same thing, that I had a
4 conversation, I'm waiving attorney-client privilege, I
5 had a conversation with my attorney and based on what 6 she told me, hearsay, about what some other person said,
7 that I was now so shocked and appalled that I suffered X
8 amount of dollars in damages.

9 MS. LAPERA: My point, your Honor, is not about 10 the conversation. My client received the letter -- if 11 it wasn't me, it would have been him or someone else
12 finding out how long they were going to continue to send 13 these communications. We wrote letters. They don't 14 read my complaint accurately. I didn't say I entered 15 into settlement discussions and when I said, your Honor,
16 it's what I expected --

17 THE COURT: What does your complaint say?

18 MS. LAPERA: My complaint says: Plaintiff,
19 through this attorney, soon thereafter, contacted 20 defendant's attorney in order to vigorously dispute the 21 factual and legal basis of the claim. The fact that 22 they made a demand, a demand doesn't have to be a
23 settlement demand. There's a demand in the coercion
24 statute that talks about making someone do something by 25 instilling a fear in them that they're going to become 26 essentially a pariah. It's not -- none of the cases

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 that they cite, none of the cases challenge Nigro, none
3 of the cases validate what he is saying. In fact, in 4 the Halperin case that they rely on so heavily, it was a
5 baseless litigation when they allowed an IIED to go over 6 a class action. They are stretching it to the limit and 7 trying to avoid what is something that they tried to do
8 to make him so concerned and so afraid because it's like 9 in the Nigro case, it's like in Caixin where someone is 10 being viewed as a despicable person in society to lose
11 everything. They've not pointed to one other situation
12 where IIED in terms of racial slurs -- yes, they're 13 horrible. In terms of being on a blurred screen when 14 you're in a hospital, horrible, doesn't make you look 15 like a pariah, doesn't make you lose everything. That's 16 why Nigro and DeJesus, which they cannot distinguish and 17 they cannot challenge the authority of on this court.

18 THE COURT: DeJesus is not --

19 MS. LEPERA: No, Nigro.

20 THE COURT: And Nigro is distinguishable.
21 Nigro specifically says that they threaten to make 22 public, and the case law with respect to defamation, all 23 that is very clear that there's a difference between 24 what you say in court in court filings versus what you
25 say in a television interview.

26 MS. LAPERA: It was an IIED claim, not a definition claim, your Honor, in Nigro.

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: I understand that, but the point is that in -- there is a difference between saying something is -- in saying something is going to be made public by going directly to the press, going directly to the media, going on a campaign, letter writing campaign versus presenting, as is your right as a citizen, your claims to a court.

MS. LAPERA: Presettlement discussions including false and defamatory -- prelitigation, excuse me, statements including false and defamatory accusations are only given a qualified privilege -- they constantly talk about settlement communications being privileged. There's no privilege that attaches to them. And this is another situation where they ignored the Front V Khalid case.

THE COURT: The privilege isn't really relevant. The issue is the discussions are made to the lawyer for the person who they are prepared to sue. They didn't -- you don't have in the complaint an allegation that they made these -- made statements to the press or to the media outside of -- outside of the litigation, or that they said they were going to make these statements, that they threatened to make these statements to the press or to the media outside of litigation. What you say is that they said here is a copy of what we are prepared to file in court.

PROCEEDINGS

MS. LAPERA: And implicit in that, your Honor, which they know very well, and why the nine million was posited, they sent that letter to my client, he was distressed upon getting that letter right out of the gate with the horrible accusations in it, himself, and then obviously wanted to see what was going on here. This is not true, kept telling them it's not true.

When I said it's what I expected, he's misconstruing that because what I meant by that is we knew at that point in time it was a holdup and an extortion, it's exactly what I expected. I did not expect them to be suggesting, know, anything like, oh, something that would be consistent with not being a holdup. Let's put it that way.

They also, you know, they mischaracterized my statement because I basically knew where they were coming from. I think that in this situation on a motion to dismiss, your Honor, given Nigro and given the circumstances where they misrepresented that this is only applicable to men, it is not. It's applicable when there's a threat to make something public and it doesn't have to be isolated simply because it is a litigation. They get that privilege when they file it. They don't

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 get the privilege to use it outside of the court system
3 because they know it's going to have the public leverage
4 of creating a pariah environment. That is something
5 that instills tremendous fear, and that's how you use
6 the course of effect to get someone to do something they 7 don't have to do otherwise. And if we're right, which 8 we will prove, we're right, this didn't happen. The man
9 has a valid claim as to what they did to him.

10 With respect, your Honor, I'd ask you to please 11 deny the motion and let us proceed into discovery on 12 this matter.

13 THE COURT: Why would you need discovery?
14 According to you -- and according to you on your claim,
15 the basis of your claim is the conversation you had with 16 him and the letter he sent you --

17 MS. LAPERA: And the falsity of it all. This 18 is false and what they've done is they used a court
19 pleading that they can't prove --

20 THE COURT: No, no.

21 MS. LAPERA: -- to intimidate my client to 22 paying nine --

23 THE COURT: Proposed court pleading that you
24 sent to your client, that you forwarded --

25 MS. LAPERA: No, no, I didn't send it to him.
26 They sent -- directly to my client's house. They didn't

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 send it to me, they sent it to him. They sent this
3 draft complaint with a letter to Mr. Haggis, which sent 4 him over the top to begin with.

5 THE COURT: And then he engaged you.

6 MS. LAPERA: Then he engaged me.

7 The only thing I offered was the nine million,
8 and I did not say -- people know how to say 408
9 settlement communication, they know how to put the CPLR
10 section up. I do it every day. They do it every day.
11 They does ask to have a settlement conference -- what I
12 call a demand and what they call a settlement demand are 13 different things. They call it a settlement demand.
14 They can characterize it that way, but even if it is, it
15 doesn't insulate them from creating extortion on 16 someone. You can't use --

17 THE COURT: Except that you conceded that there
18 is no civil extortion in this state --

19 MS. LAPERA: It's used in the cases as an ILED
20 claim, those facts of extortion. If associated with 21 creating a stigma which causes distress and that's why
22 so many of these cases said no because it was not 23 outrageous what was going to happen to the person, they 24 couldn't have suffered that much distress by somebody
25 simply saying, you know, okay, I'm going to film
26 something -- in that case they were blurred -- this case

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 involving the woman that I just mentioned, if you can
3 have an IIED case with threats about saying something
4 about someone's sexual history because if that's 5 revealed, however it's revealed, you don't file a case
6 with lurid details but for the press. You want to file
7 a case? You just put a couple of facts, put a claim in,
8 you don't put in 5 to 10 pages of purported outrageous
9 false conduct, which makes the person when it's out
10 there seem to be horrible and then one paragraph of a 11 claim. It's clear on its face what the intention is.
12 We can't allow in society the process of the court.

13 There's another problem, your Honor. There's a 14 policy of not using the Court to do things like that.
15 That's not what the court is for. There's a reason why
16 we have a court system to adjudicate facts. If we are 17 going to turn this over to people being able to use a 18 mechanism that is violative of good conscious and also 19 case law, and criminal statute and use that to 20 effectuate something to which they would not be entitled
21 to under the law or in the court because of the fear
22 that's instilled, if we allow that, we are allowing 23 misuse of the system, which is a policy in and of itself
24 that they don't want to acknowledge.

25 THE COURT: We're going to move on to --

26 MS. LEPERA: Thank you, your Honor.

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 THE COURT: -- we're going to have to do this
3 more quickly, I have other matters.

4 With respect to the Index Number 161137, 2017,
5 I will hear -- in the motion to amend the supplemental 6 pleadings.

7 MS. SALZMAN: Thank you, your Honor.

8 Leave to amend, as your Honor noted in the 9 prior argument under the CPLR 3025 (b) shall be freely
10 given, unless there is prejudice to the other side.
11 There is no prejudice in allowing this amendment in this 12 case.

13 Defendant, Mr. Haggis, hasn't even attempted to 14 articulate prejudice and, of course, nor could he. The 15 case is in its infancy, he hasn't filed an answer yet,
16 discovery hasn't begun. We're talking about adding a
17 new cause of action pled on the same facts, the same
18 allegations, the same transactions and occurrences.

19 Again and again, the First Department has said
20 that does not cause prejudice to the other side, leave
21 to amend should be granted.

22 The claim is also clearly meritorious. CPLR
23 213 (c) allows for an extended statute of limitations
24 for exactly this kind of claim, rape in the first degree
25 and other sexual misconduct in that statute.

26 Again, no showing by Mr. Haggis that there is any lack of merit to this motion to amend.

PROCEEDINGS

Their opposition --

THE COURT: Explain for me, counsel -- it seems like there's -- seems like there's a gap here. The CPLR 213 (c) extends the statute of limitation, but what conveys the private right of action to enforce the Penal Law provisions that you set forth?

MS. SALZMAN: It's not a civil claim to enforce the Penal action, your Honor, it is a civil claim for the damages arising out of those acts.

THE COURT: I understand, so the question is what is the cause of action that you are seeking -- what is the cause of action by which you are proceeding?

Say there is -- they offer that, perhaps, you intended to file under a civil assault claim or perhaps you intended to file under civil battery claim, but what I am presented with is Penal Law sections that you say have been violated and a procedural statute that allows for the extension of statute of limitation to enforce acts -- to enforce a claim for acts that might also be false, might also be the cause for Penal Law violations but I don't have, in between, something like assault or battery that would be a cause of action that I could present to the jury. By the end of the day, I must be able to present to the jury instructions on the law. I can't present to the jury, by themselves, Penal Law statutes, because there's no private right of action with respect to those Penal Law statutes. I can only present what is authorized under the law.

PROCEEDINGS

So it seems like there's some potential gap without there being something like assault or battery, which you say also happened to violate Penal Law section.

MS. SALZMAN: The complaint absolutely pleads an assault and a battery, your Honor.

THE COURT: What section does it say that?

MS. SALZMAN: What section of the complaint?

THE COURT: Yes. What section is entitled assault and battery --

MS. SALZMAN: The proposed amend the complaint, your Honor, the second cause of action is entitled assault and battery.

What Mr. Haggis did was forcibly remove Ms. Breest's clothing, forcibly kiss her, forcibly penetrate her vagina with his fingers. Those assertions plead assault and battery, and the statute 213 (c) merely allows an extended statute of limitation if certain kinds of assault and battery rise to the level of violating certain enumerated sections of the Penal Law, which, very clearly, not all assault and batteries do. The intentional tort of assault and battery are far broader and CPLR 213 (c) extended the statute of limitation only for those intentional torts, only for those civil claims, as the legislature said in the CPLR, that amount to acts that would violate the Penal Law and they enumerate specific sections of the Penal Law which we had quoted in the proposed amended complaint in order to make it clear that 213 (c) is satisfied by the kind of assault and battery alleged to have occurred here.

PROCEEDINGS

The kind of assault and battery alleged to have occurred here would meet the Penal Law definition for rape in the first degree, for criminal sexual act in the first degree and aggravated sexual abuse in the first degree, which are some of the enumerated sections of the Penal Law listed in 213 (c).

So the claim is both proper as an assault and battery claim and timely under the extended statute of limitation set forth in CPLR 213 (c).

THE COURT: Go ahead, please.

MS. MOVIT: Your Honor, Section 213 (c) is an Article 2 entitled: Limitations of time.

Section 213 (c) is intended to extend limitations of time on certain causes of action if they meet the requirements thereunder, but is not a cause of action itself.

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 Assault and battery, as your Honor is well
3 aware, are different torts with different elements.
4 It's not one tort, it's two torts.

5 I believe in the reply brief on the motion to 6 amend they claim that the second cause of action is 7 actually four causes of action and they quote assault
8 and battery, rape, criminal sexual act, aggravated
9 sexual abuse, close quote.

10 Well, CPLR 3104 as your Honor is also well
11 aware requires separate causes of action to be 12 separately stated and numbered.

13 Mr. Haggis does not have -- it is a moving 14 target were this claim allowed to proceed on 213 (c), as 15 Mr. Haggis would not know what elements he would have to 16 disprove because it's unclear what cause of action or 17 multiple causes of action are being alleged. Assault is 18 a tort. Battery is a different tort. Rape and criminal 19 sexual act, aggravated sexual abuse is horrific,
20 obviously, Mr. Haggis did not do that, but those are 21 criminal statutes. CPLR 213 (c) does not give a private 22 right of action under criminal statutes and this 23 complaint as proposed -- complaint is drafted, does not 24 give Mr. Haggis or the Court adequate notice of what the 25 elements are that Ms. Breest is trying to prove.

26 THE COURT: Well, CPLR 213 (c) -- it's not

PROCEEDINGS

there for the district attorney, it is a civil statute providing some form of additional limitations period to allow a civil litigant to bring an action.

So it's clearly a complaint of dotting i's and crossing t's, but clearly the purpose of the -- the purpose of the statute is to allow for -- purpose of the statute is to allow for a civil litigant to bring a civil action based upon certain Penal Law violations -- transgressions of the Penal Law.

MS. MOVIT: Yes, your Honor. CPLR 213 (c) is intended to provide an extended statute of limitations for existing civil causes of action if the elements are also met for certain criminal statutes, but it's not creating any new causes of action. So this is a notice issue, your Honor, in that this pleading doesn't comport with CPLR 3014 as to this purported second cause of action, is it one cause of action, is it four causes of action, what are the elements, it doesn't make that clear, and therefore it fails. That assault is a different tort than battery, different elements. Other things they purport to plead are not civil causes of action.

This is supposed to extend the statute of limitations if the elements are not met and not create new rights of action.

PROCEEDINGS

And if I may also, your Honor, the first -- the proposed second amended complaint also fails because the gender motivated violent prevention act claim is inadequately pled. That's pled identically to how it's pled in the first amended complaint, which is the currently operative pleading. This is a hate crime statute and has been uniformly interpreted as such. The claim under the statute requires not only an alleged crime of violence but that such crime be committed due, at least in part, to animus based on the victim's gender, and essentially, Ms. Breest's counsel is trying to write the animus element out of the statute.

Interpreting the plain language of this statute, the New York courts have held that there must be nonconclusory allegations of animus in addition to the allegation of the horrific act of violence, which again, Mr. Haggis did not commit.

THE COURT: This act is based on the Violence Against Women Act and there is a multitude of -- a multitude of federal court cases that suggest that in cases involving -- involving rape, some even suggest that it's, per se -- per se case of gender bias, that's what the Ninth Circuit says, that's what the Eastern District of Pennsylvania says, that's what the Northern District of Iowa says, District of Colorado, District of

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 Puerto Rico, I mean, I wouldn't need to specifically
3 address that at this stage, whether it's per se
4 violation, but what has been pleaded in their complaint
5 is certain language that is alleged by Mr. Haggis to 6 indicate his level of excitement at an idea that he is 7 invoking fear into Ms. Breest or -- and claims that her
8 claimed assault is a pattern of action against other --
9 against well. So I wouldn't necessarily need to say
10 that every -- every rape is per se gender based, but 11 that is out there and multiple courts have said that and 12 this case, in addition to that allegation, they have 13 certain factual assertions that they say we could rely 14 upon.

15 MS. MOVIT: Your Honor, with respect to the 16 factual allegations of what Mr. Haggis allegedly said, 17 which he adamantly denies and disputes, the -- and the 18 analogy to the federal statute, both of those were 19 recently addressed by United States District Judge
20 Pauley in the Southern District. It is a case that we 21 e-mailed to your Honor's part, I don't know if your 22 Honor received it. My associate has a copy to hand up
23 if your Honor would like. Hughes V 21st Century Fox, 24 304 F Supp. 3d 429, and in that case both involves 25 alleged statements that are very similar to those 26 alleged by Ms. Breest, and in the Hughes case there was an alleged rape and there was alleged extended abuse, both physical and verbal thereafter. The allegation was that, among other things, that the defendant said, quote, you know you want it, close quote, and things that are of a similar nature to things that are alleged against Mr. Haggis. With respect to those statements, Judge Pauley held that, quote, while actions arising from the statute are in --

PROCEEDINGS

THE COURT: What statute is he looking at?

MR. MOVIT: He's looking at the New York City gender motivated violence protection act.

Judge Pauley said, while actions arising from the statute are invariably predicated on reprehensible conduct against female victims, this factor alone cannot sustain a GNBA claim, close quote.

And similarly in Gottwald V Sebert, which we cite, there was alleged improper statements being alleged, but they weren't directed towards well in general or they weren't using specific anti well slurs, four letter words and that sort of thing.

And also, in Cordero there was a despicable alleged -- allegations -- you know, allegations of despicable conduct in term of sexual assault, but there wasn't any kind of allegation of a hate crime, that this has been recognized by the Court to be a hate crime statute.

PROCEEDINGS

And that something beyond the despicable -- the allegation of despicable act of rape more is alleged to become a hate crime.

With respect to the analogies to the Violence Against Women Act, Judge Pauley recognized that the New York federal cases applying to Violence Against Women Act also, quote, require the gender animus element to be pleaded, close quote.

So while Ms. Breest has found cases from various jurisdictions around the country, which she says follow the federal statute in a way that bolsters her claim that it is a per se offence under the GMVA for their to be an alleged rape, that's not how New York courts work, as Judge Pauley recognized, that's not how New York courts interpreted --

THE COURT: We're getting both sides of things. Either we have judges saying that you -- if, you don't say it's gender based and in that conclusory fashion, then it is a problem and we have other courts saying that it doesn't matter whether you say it's gender based we need to establish by fact that it's gender based.

So if they have led -- given anything, your complaint -- not your complaint, your objection to their complaint is it's filled with too many facts. And then

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 you're saying they have facts they don't need, not that 3 there are simply conclusory statements regarding the 4 nature of the claims.

5 MS. MOVIT: Your Honor, Mr. Haggis's position
6 is that the complaint of Ms. Breest is filled with 7 extensive unnecessary salacious details that he 8 vociferously disputes and denies, however, what it is 9 devoid of is evidence establishing -- under -- under the 10 case law, cases courts consistently interpreting the New 11 York City statute evidence of gender based animus in 12 terms of this being a hate crime. Statements against --

13 THE COURT: What sites, courts are those,
14 besides Judge Cardi --

15 MS. MOVIT: Judge Pauley --

16 THE COURT: -- Judge Pauley?

17 MS. MOVIT: Justice Kornreich in Gottwald V
18 Sebert --

19 THE COURT: Gottwald verse Seibert case is 20 something entirely different. I have some of those 21 cases, and there are a multitude of suits all over the 22 country between Kesha, the singer, her mother and her
23 manager. They are mixed with a variety of facts related 24 to business and with respect to claims of domination, as 25 well as sexual -- possible sexual misconduct.

26 MS. MOVIT: With respect to the gender motivated violence claim -- the issues were the same. There was an allegation of alleged rape, but that was held to be insufficient because there was not allegations that it was a hate crime, such as, you know, statements against well in general or that sort of thing.

PROCEEDINGS

With respect to the allegations of other alleged acts of sexual misconduct -- your Honor, there is a serious notice problem under CPLR 2301 3 in that Ms. Breest's counsel refuses to state who these alleged anonymous victims are.

THE COURT: They would have to do that in discovery, right?

MS. MOVIT: They've not even agreed to do that. Mr. Haggis --

THE COURT: We haven't done any discovery. We're at the motion to dismiss stage. It's not a matter of agreeing. This is if we go forward in discovery and they're not prepared to give you names, then the matters will be stricken.

MS. MOVIT: Okay.

Let me just get to the motion to dismiss.

MS. SALZMAN: Absolutely, your, Honor.

The case that opposing counsel just cited the Hughes case did quote from some of the cases that have

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 sustained gender motivated violence claims. And the 3 quote that Judge Pauley found lacking in his case, but 4 which is certainly satisfied here is, quote, animus can
5 be shown through factors such as, the perpetrator's
6 language, the severity of the attack, the lack of 7 provocation, the previous history of similar incidents,
8 the absence of other apparent motive and common sense.
9 Those are the factors that New York federal courts and 10 federal courts across the country have used to examine 11 gender motivated claims of violence for animus.

12 Just like they look for animus in any other
13 hate crime statute, those are the factors you consider.
14 In every single one of those factors, while not pled in 15 the Hughes case, is pled here.

16 The perpetrator's language. Mr. Haggis used
17 explicitly sexist and derogatory comments during the 18 course of his violent assault of Ms. Breest, including 19 comments that explicitly referenced her female anatomy
20 and gender, such as you're nice and tight, referring to 21 her vagina; I've had a vasectomy so you can't get 22 pregnant; you've been flirting with me for months.
23 These are overt statements in Mr. Haggis's own language
24 of gender bias.

25 The next factor, severity of the attack.
26 That's also satisfied. The attack alleged in our

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 complaint is rape, the most egregious form of gender
3 violence a woman can ever suffer. It doesn't get more
4 severe than rape.

5 The next factor, lack of provocation. Also 6 satisfied. This is not a situation where we're alleging
7 where there's any claim that these people were engaged 8 in some sort of altercation or a tussle and out of that 9 we're trying to plead a gender motivated crime of 10 violence. This is a situation where far older more 11 powerful man lured a young woman to his apartment and 12 immediately violently, accosted and raped her. There is 13 a complete lack of provocation.

14 THE COURT: Doesn't this seem to get back to 15 your argument that -- depends on the argument that rape
16 in and of itself is a gender based claim. Now, it is -- 17 that has been -- you've indicated cases from multiple 18 federal courts where that has been accepted as the 19 standard. Justice Kornreich has made a comment that not 20 every rape is necessarily motivated by gender. These 21 statements that you just provided, these add detail, but 22 they don't necessarily add any detail that this
23 particular attack is motivated by animus against gender,
24 motivated by -- maybe motivated by gender, the question
25 is is it motivated by hatred of the gender and that's -- 26 that's the question. If an argument on your side is

1 PROCEEDINGS

2 that that isn't necessarily the case, but Justice
3 Kornreich has said that she doesn't necessarily accept
4 that to be the case.

5 MS. SALZMAN: The bulk of courts disagree with 6 Justice Kornreich on that point, but as your Honor
7 noted, you don't need to find that every rape is, as a
8 matter of law, motivated by gender. That's not the 9 issue here. The issue here is whether this complaint,
10 as a matter of law, pleads facts sufficient from which a
11 reasonable jury could conclude that Mr. Haggis
12 demonstrated gender animus when he violently raped
13 Ms. Breest and made these comments. This is an analysis
14 that must be done, just like in a sexual discrimination,
15 employment case or any kind of discrimination case,
16 using the totality of the circumstances available. You
17 can consider circumstantial evidence, you can consider 18 indirect evidence. That is done all the time in 19 discrimination cases and in hate crime cases.

20 Mr. Haggis was not required to say, I hate
21 well, as he raped Ms. Breest for her to have a claimant
22 for gender motivated violence. If that was the case,
23 the statute would say that and it doesn't. And if that 24 were the holding here, that would eviscerate the purpose
25 of the city gender motivated violence law which was 26 specifically enacted to facilitate and make easier

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 victims of sexual abuse accessing the courts. The
3 Brzonkala case the Fourth Circuit, that case the court
4 said the purpose of the statute will be eviscerated if 5 it was required to claim that a plaintiff had to allege,
6 for example, that defendant raped her and stated: I
7 hate well. Verbal expression of bias is not required to 8 plead a gender motivated claim of violence, but here, we 9 have pled verbal expression of bias. Saying to a well
10 while you were engaged in violent sexual intercourse
11 with her that you are nice and tight, you've been 12 flirting with me for months, you're scared of me, aren't 13 you, those statements are explicitly, on their face,
14 sexist, derogatory and evidence of disrespect for women.
15 No one who respects women could say to a woman as he 16 violently accosted her, you're scared of me, you are 17 asking for it because you've been flirting with me for 18 months, that's exactly the kind of verbal expression of 19 bias that is considered again and again, not just for 20 gender motivated crimes of violence, but four all hate
21 crimes.

22 The other factors identified by the courts to 23 consider in the totality of the circumstances include a 24 previous history of similar incidents and that, too, we 25 have pled in this case. Mr. Haggis has a history of 26 violently sexually assaulting women. We've identified three in the amended complaint and there are more.

PROCEEDINGS

This is not a man who rapes men and women alike. This is a man who specifically preys on women, and as the federal court, the Southern District of New York said in the Judd Mahon case which is cited in the Hughes decision defendant invokes here -- sorry -- an extensive history of unwanted sexual advances towards women, the fact that all, quote, previous victims of defendant's unwanted sexual advances were women underscores plaintiff's claim that defendant was motivated by a gender animus towards women.

In that case, Southern District of New York denied a motion to dismiss a gender motivated claim of violence, because the plaintiff had alleged the defendant had a private history, just like Mr. Haggis does here, and he made comments about her breasts when he fondled her and groped her.

We have pled that prior history here and neither in Gottwald nor in Cordero nor in Hughes was there any such prior history pled.

The next factor is the absence of any other apparent motive. What Congress and city counsel were concerned with when they wrote these laws was that not all random acts of violence against women be turned into a cause of action. A mugging or a robbery gone awry, for example, might in the meet this threshold, but what we're talking about here is rape, and there is no other basis for Mr. Haggis to lure Ms. Breest into his apartment and violently accost and rape her, other than a gender motive.

PROCEEDINGS

And finally, common sense, exactly what I just articulated. There is no other reason for Mr. Haggis to say these things, to act in that violent way and to have done that with multiple other women unless he exhibited gender animus.

At a very minimum, as a matter of law, on a motion to dismiss, when all facts alleged in the complaint are presumed to be true, this court cannot rule, as a matter of law, that a gender motivated claim of violence has not been pled. As the court said in the Chrisnino(ph) case, which is another Southern District of New York case cited by defendant, intent or animus in such cases is usually a question of fact. A question for the jury. The Court there denied the motion to dismiss a gender motivated claim of violence because the plaintiff had alleged that the defendant in that case pushed her. It wasn't even a rape, it was pushing her and calling her a bitch. If that was enough to meet the minimum threshold to plead and create an issue of fact, we have certainly satisfied it here.

PROCEEDINGS

And there is no case, anything like this case that had been pled so far, in terms of the nature of the detailed pleadings, in particular, the nature of the pleading of a prior history of sexual abuse, which was properly pled using Jane Doe designations to protect the identity of third party witnesses at the pleading stage, your Honor, these are women who have not brought a lawsuit against Mr. Haggis, who are very much in fear of him and of the publicity that this case has engendered since the moment Mr. Mr. Haggis leaked it to the press when he filed it, and their identity needs to be protected. Ms. Brest herself could have filed this case as a Jane Doe plaintiff. That is the law in New York. That a plaintiff seeking to sue for sexual abuse, especially in a case that has garnered media attention, can bring it as a Jane Doe plaintiff. If we afford that protection to a plaintiff, certainly at a minimum it must be afforded to a third party witness.

The idea that the allegations concerning the Jane Doe witnesses are insufficiently detailed or conclusory, is frivolous. Paragraphs 83 through 132 of amended complaint state in detail what happened to those women. It is the very opposite of conclusory.

MS. MOVIT: Your Honor, very briefly.

THE COURT: Very briefly.

PROCEEDINGS

MS. MOVIT: First, with respect to the analogy of employment discrimination cases, that exact analogy was rejected by Judge Pauley in the Hughes case, so I refer your Honor to that.

With respect to the Jane Does, the allegations are inconsistent, they're a constantly moving target. For example -- there's numerous examples in our brief, but to give one of them, the proposed amended complaint in the current complaint alleges a forced kiss, excuse me an attempted kiss, an attempted kiss. The brief alleges a forced kiss. This is exactly why those allegations are a moving target.

With respect to the factors under -- one particular case that Ms. Breest's counsel just referenced, the bottom line remains that the facts in Hughes, very, very similar. There was an alleged extended history of abuse. The words used by the defendant, allegedly, were very similar to what's alleged here, again, which Mr. Haggis denies. And, again, the statute has that extra element which as a matter of public policy Ms. Breest is trying to write out of the statute, in the bottom, it's in there, animus.

She talked about a case about a specific gender related slur that begins with a B. Again, there's no specific general related slur alleged here. This is a CPLR pleading issue that yes there would be an inference ultimately by the jury if it got that far as to malice, but there has to be facts pled that are non conclusory at this stage for it to even proceed beyond that part.

PROCEEDINGS

And with respect to the Jane Does, Mr. Haggis needs to know -- we can work out terms for it, but it's prejudicial for Ms. Breest's counsel to keep filing pleadings making statements about these alleged Jane Does. Mr. Haggis has -- disputes any and all such allegations of improper conduct and they're constantly changing the allegations of what actually happened here, so it's an extremely prejudicial situation.

THE COURT: The Court has a series of motions before it. There's a motion to strike portions of the defendant's answer in the matter of Haggis versus Breest, Index Number 161123 of 2017; there's also a motion, motion sequence number two, under Index Number 161123 of 2017, which is a motion to dismiss the action, Haggis versus Breest, as well as for attorneys fees and sanctions.

And there is under Index Number 161137, 2017, a motion to amend the complaint pursuant to CPLR 3025.

There is also a motion to dismiss the verified amended complaint or in the alternative, to strike certain allegations in the Breest versus Haggis matter under Index Number 161137 of 2017.

PROCEEDINGS

I note, as well, under Index Number 161123 of 2017, there is also a cross motion for sanctions. With respect to the motion to strike portions of defendant's answer, motion sequence number one under 161123, 2017, it is this Court's view that the pleadings here are not prolix and confusing and that the language, while filled with some level of either -- the language is, I guess, not temperate, but I don't see anything here in the language that would suggest that it is unrelated to the essential claims. There are, in addition, enumerated answers, and so I think is otherwise compliant with the CPLR, and accordingly it is hereby ordered that motion sequence number one with respect to Index Number 161123, 2017, is denied.

Motion sequence number two is a motion to dismiss the complaint by the -- by Mr. Haggis that also seeks attorneys fees and also sanctions, and the argument here is that the claim here for intentional infliction of emotional distress is improper in that it does not allege conduct that could be considered outrageous within the meaning of that cause of action. And the argument is that the sole claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress arises out of the

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 allegation by Haggis, that he became distressed when it
3 was communicated to him, pre-litigation, that in order
4 to resolve allegations of sexual misconduct against him,
5 which he denies to be true, he would have to pay an
6 amount that he considered extortionate. There is no
7 allegation in the complaint that prior to the 8 institution by Mr. Haggis of this lawsuit that there
9 were press stories or media stories that could be traced
10 to the defendant. There are no claims that there were 11 threats to go on a media or Internet campaign. The 12 claim here is that the intentional infliction of 13 emotional distress came as a result of one of the 14 attorneys for Mr. Haggis conveying to him the facts and 15 circumstances of settlement discussions, as well as a 16 proposed complaint that was sent to -- directly to 17 Mr. Haggis by counsel for the defendant in this action.

18 This Court is of the view that it would serve 19 as a chill on the ability of persons who believe that 20 another has committed sexual misconduct against them if 21 they were unable to engage in pre-litigation
22 discussions, including proposing settlement numbers,
23 even outrageous settlement numbers, if such actions
24 could serve as the basis for a suit against them.

25 It is this Court's view that would be in 26 violation of public policy of the State of New York and would be an action that would be certainly something that is not to be encouraged. I look at that in the context of the great disfavor that New York courts have had with respect to intentional infliction of emotional distress cases, generally.

PROCEEDINGS

I also look at it in terms of cases where the First Department and the Court of Appeals which have held that the law establishes that settlement talks are not actionable and are not the basis for an intentional infliction of an emotional distress case.

I have heard counsel for Mr. Haggis with respect to the Second Department case of Nigro versus Pickett. The Court is fully cognizant that if the Second Department has produced a case that is on all fours with the case before this Court, that this Court is required to follow that authority, assuming there is no First Department authority to the contrary; however, this Court does not believe that the Nigro case is on point with respect to this case. In this case, the only threat that was made was that there would be a litigation instituted based upon the allegations of Ms. Breest. In the Nigro case, it is said that the defendant there threatened to make public the allegedly false allegation that the plaintiffs had subjected defendant to sexual harassment and sexual assault.

PROCEEDINGS

There is also the statement that the defendant, with the intention of pressuring the plaintiff to settle whether it filed a false complaint with the New York City Police Department.

Here, there is no allegation that Ms. Breest threatened to do anything other than pursue her claims in a civil litigation forum. There is no indication that she threatened to go, in the first instance, to the press or to go to the press, other than by informing the press of what was a public filing and that is, in fact, not even in the complaint. And in the complaint what is suggested is Ms. Breest said that she would -- she was prepared to make her -- to file a civil action and provided Mr. Haggis with a copy of that proposed complaint and that after an exchange with counsel for Mr. Haggis, conveyed to that counsel the number that Ms. Breest was prepared to accept to avoid pursuing her civil litigation claim.

There is no allegation here that Ms. Breest has filed a false criminal complaint with the New York City Police Department.

There is no allegation that she had made prior to the institution of this suit, in any event, any public campaign by way of Internet or by way of press and media.

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 The Court would cite, as well, the matter of 3 Kaye versus Trump, another First Department, 58-AD3d,
4 579, in which it was held that the commencement of two
5 baseless lawsuits did not constitute outrageous conduct 6 necessary to support an intentional infliction of 7 emotional distress case.

8 Counsel for Mr. Haggis has noted that we find 9 ourselves in a climate, a particular climate currently 10 at which there would be heightened scrutiny, and perhaps 11 more ready acceptance by media or press to convey what 12 they say are false allegations, and that there is a 13 danger that the -- that a false allegation could be 14 easily accepted in this climate and that that alone
15 provides -- in addition to everything else, not alone,
16 that, in addition to everything else, would establish 17 Mr. Haggis's emotional distress.

18 I can't accept that -- I can't accept that. I
19 don't say that it's not true, I can't accept it from a 20 standpoint of addressing whether or not someone who 21 alleges that they are a victim of some form of physical 22 misconduct, should be chilled from making that assertion 23 in a civil forum if that is the only place they go. If 24 this was about claims made on the Internet, if this was 25 about claims made in the press and the media without 26 going to court, then perhaps this would be different,

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 but I don't believe that it is. Accordingly, I believe
3 it is inappropriate here to allow for the intentional
4 infliction of emotional distress claim to be based upon,
5 here, the pre-suit settlement discussions between the 6 attorneys and even based upon the receipt by the 7 plaintiff here of a draft of a complaint against him.
8 Accordingly, it is hereby ordered that the motion to 9 dismiss is granted.

10 In the court's discretion, given the complexity
11 of this issue, the Court believes that the motion for -- 12 to the extent the motion seeks sanctions by the 13 defendant, it should not be granted and to the extent
14 that the cross motion seeks sanctions in favor of the 15 plaintiff, again, given the level of complexity of this 16 matter, I don't believe that that cross motion for 17 sanctions is appropriate either.

18 With respect to the motion to amend under Index
19 Number 161137 of 2017, this Court has already noted 20 earlier and today in another matter amendment should be 21 freely given in the absence of prejudice. There is, at 22 this early stage, very early stage, no prejudice in this
23 Court's mind that would be had by including the amended
24 claims. The Court notes the argument by Mr. Haggis's
25 attorneys that perhaps some delineation might be had by 26 virtue of the second cause of action, to the extent that

PROCEEDINGS

1
2 assault and battery are conflated and not separately
3 charged. I don't know that that's a substantive
4 complaint. If it is, it can be explored by way of 5 demand for a bill of particulars or some other
6 litigation device that would require some specification.
7 So I believe that can be addressed. There are 8 substantial facts, the bulk of which Mr. Haggis denies.
9 I don't believe this is a case of Mr. Haggis being 10 unable to determine what he is being accused of.

11 To the extent that there is a challenge based 12 on the New York City Victims of Gender Motivated
13 Violence Protection Act, I'll address that in the motion 14 to dismiss, not in change with respect to the motion to 15 amend, to the extent that we're talking about the CPLR
16 213-c, that does allow for the extension on statute of 17 limitations and makes clear that the intent of the 18 legislature is to allow for a private right of action
19 that identifies and relates the facts to the specified
20 Penal Law provisions.

21 Accordingly, it is hereby ordered with respect
22 to motion sequence number one, on Index Number 16 --
23 excuse me, 161137, 2017 that that motion to amend be 24 granted and I will direct that counsel serve a copy of 25 the amended complaint in the form attached to the moving 26 papers within 15 days of today's date, and that the defendant in this case respond to that amended supplemental pleading within 30 days of service.

PROCEEDINGS

With respect to motion sequence number two, which is to dismiss the amended complaint, the Court -- the Court, viewing this as a motion to dismiss primarily under 3211 (a) 7 must accept the well-pled facts as true and allow for a liberal interpretation of those claims. The argument that the gender motivated violence cause that is established by New York City Administrative Code requires something. The argument by Mr. Haggis is that the gender motivated violence provision here requires some demonstration that the act is motivated by animus against women is one that the Court accepts. The question is whether we look at the 140, 150 paragraphs set forth in the complaint here, whether or not those facts adequately state a claim for violence motivated against women, the Court believes that is a -- that there is enough here, if we accept all those claims as true, that this is a matter of factual interpretation to be presented before the jury. There is language that the -- there's language that the plaintiff here, in this matter indicates a disrespect for women. There's language here that indicates an enjoyment of some level of violence as against women. There is an indication here of the lack of provocation or a lack of any form of 2 confusion on the part of the alleged assailant here.

PROCEEDINGS

1
3 The question is whether under the totality of 4 circumstances here, this indicates a level of animus
5 against women, I believe is one, as I said, may need to 6 go to a jury, but certainly should be informed by 7 further discovery between the parties.

8 It is also the case here, in particular, that 9 there are allegations of -- allegations of a pattern and 10 practice of activity that the plaintiff claims indicates
11 an animus towards women by virtue of Jane Doe
12 allegations of similar acts of alleged violence against 13 women.

14 Those all need to be explored in discovery.
15 The defendants will be entitled to explore whether those 16 are made up out of whole cloth or whether they were 17 actually individuals who are prepared to testify in some 18 form or fashion, give evidence regarding those issues.
19 Certainly, laying out that it is a hearsay statement
20 that other women have said these things is not something 21 that can go to a jury. So if you want to put flesh on 22 those statements, then they need to be backed up with 23 some kind of exchange of evidence; and if not, then 24 before this matter is ready to be heard by way of 25 summary judgement or by way of trial, those allegations
26 will be stricken, and then we'd be left with a more focused determination under the statute.

PROCEEDINGS

Accordingly, it is this Court's view that the motion under Index Number 161137 of 2017 to dismiss the verified amended complaint or in the alternative to strike certain allegations is denied, to the extent that it still relates to the second amended complaint.

I will direct that the parties appear for a preliminary conference on October 25th at 9:30 a.m. in this part, in this courtroom. They are free to engage any form of discovery they wish to engage in ahead of time, hopefully, by agreement. If you are able to work on protective orders, that would be a normal thing that people seek to do, but we'll have a preliminary conference date in the event parties are not able to do that on their own, and that if they are able to do it on their own, will have it as an opportunity to check in. .

I direct counsel for both parties to split the cost of the transcript of today's proceedings. Either one of those parties can submit the transcript to the Court or simply the court reporter can deliver it to the Court once the court reporter can deliver it to the Court once the parties have made appropriate arrangements, and the Court, once it receives the transcript, will so order that transcript. That so ordered transcript will reflect the Court's rulings of

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11 12
13
14
15
16
17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26

PROCEEDINGS

today and reflect the Court's decision and order of this date.

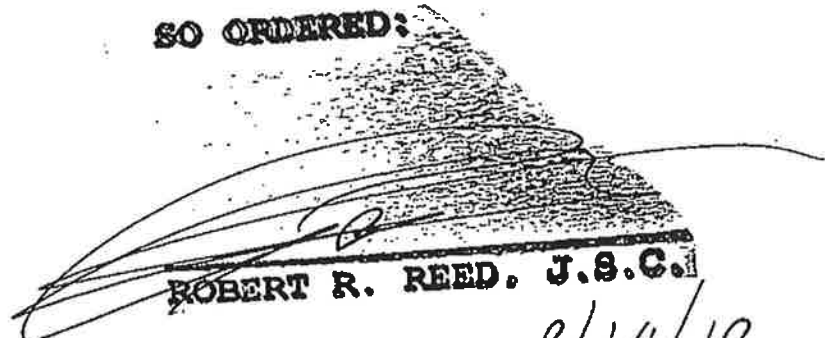

The record is closed.

* * *

CERTIFIED THE FOREGOING IS A TRUE AND ACCURATE TRANSCRIPTION
OF THE PROCEEDINGS, THIS DATE.

VINCENT J. PALOMBO, RMR

SO ORDERED:

ROBERT R. REED, J.S.C.
8/14/18

437 MADISON AVE., 25TH FLOOR
NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10022-7001

Jonathan S. Abady, Esq.
Emery Cellil Brinckerhoff & Abady LLP
600 Fifth Avenue at Rockefeller Center
10th Floor
New York, New York 10020

MITCHELL SILBERBERG & KNUPP LLP
A LAW PARTNERSHIP INCLUDING PROFESSIONAL CORPORATIONS

BY HAND